ABOUT US

A History of Leadership and Innovation in Supporting Education

BNED has a legacy of serving the education industry. It began in 1965, when founder Leonard Riggio opened his first bookstore, the Student Book Exchange, in New York City's Greenwich Village.

In 2015, Barnes & Noble Education, Inc. became an independent public company and parent of Barnes & Noble College, trading on the New York Stock Exchange under the ticker symbol BNED. Becoming a public company allowed BNED to pursue greater growth opportunities in the education sector, including enhancing and expanding its digital capabilities.

Today, BNED is a leading solutions provider for the education industry, driving affordability, access and achievement at hundreds of academic institutions nationwide and ensuring millions of students are equipped for success in the classroom and beyond. As a leader in the education space, BNED's suite of product offerings and solutions work together to meet the evolving needs of the education system and a new generation of students.
